City council responds to county center issue

By MARTY FINLEY

mfinley@thenewsenterprise.com

Elizabethtown Councilman Larry Ashlock on Monday said he wanted to launch a debate about the city's inclusion in a unification review commission following what he called a "unilateral" decision to move county offices out of downtown.

Ashlock criticized a proposal by Judge-Executive Harry Berry to allocate $500,000 from the county's general reserves for design of a new county government center, describing it as a poor step toward a united government.

Ashlock said Berry failed to discuss the plan with city officials, the Elizabethtown-Hardin County

County library to move reference materials online

By AMBER COULTER

acoulter@thenewsenterprise.com

Many library reference materials are set for cyberspace.

Hardin County Public Library system officials plan to gradually replace print reference books in both branches with online versions often produced by publishers of those books.

The library began last week offering Chilton Auto Repair manuals through an online database. Other new databases are the Testing and Education Reference Center and Career Transitions.

Often, online materials come with annual subscriptions that are consistently updated, eliminating the need for the library to replace outdated reference books, Library Director Rene Hutcheson said.

Medical reference books, which are among the most expensive reference books, and computer science books are among the types of reference books updated most often, she said.

"As soon as the book is printed and distributed from the warehouse, it's out of date," she said.

Annual subscriptions can cost more than print versions, but one set of print books the library used to buy and canceled because of price cost about $800 for two volumes, Hutcheson said.

"Some print reference books are outrageously expensive," she said.

Moving the print reference books to an online format likely will be a welcome change for patrons, who seem to enjoy online research more than searching through the books, Hutcheson said.

The reference books don't circulate outside of the library, making it impossible to determine exactly how many are being used.

Staff observation has indicated the reference books are among the least-used in the library system and most patrons in that area are using the library's wireless Internet with laptop computers, Hutcheson said.

Coroner's office touts master experience

By SARAH BENNETT

sbennett@thenewsenterprise.com

The Hardin County Coroner's Office added its fifth master coroner to its ranks last month when Deputy Coroner Pat Elmore reached the highest level of achievement.

According to Coroner Dr. Bill Lee, Hardin is the only county in Kentucky to have five master coroners on staff.

There are three levels of achievement for coroners: basic, advanced and master. To reach the master level, a coroner must complete a minimum of 300 post-mortem examinations, serve in the position for 12 years, be a member of the Kentucky Coroner's Association for eight years and attend a minimum of two coroner's conferences, according to the KCA website.

The requirements are not easy, Lee said, especially in counties with a small population or high turnover rate. He estimates there's about 30 to 40 master coroners in the state.

ELMORE

Hardin County has two full-time coroners and three part-time. Between the five, they have a total of 118 years of experience in the office, Lee said, with John Clemens, Barry Brown and Kenneth Spangenberg each serving 20 or more years.

"It makes for a better situation," he said about the amount of experience on staff. "I'd put my guys up against anyone in the state."

Elmore was awarded his ranking the weekend of April 26-27 at the KCA annual conference. The deputy coroner said he's been in the position for 12 years, but prior to that, he worked part-time with Hardin County EMS and served with the Elizabethtown Fire Department for 22 years.

Lee said each coroner on staff has experience with emergency medical services, which means they come in with experience working death scenes and dealing with families' grief.

Coroners do not perform autopsies, he said, which are actually performed by forensic pathologists in the Kentucky Medical Examiner's Office. However, on occasion, a coroner may assist with the autopsy.

Coroners are called to any death scene requiring a post-mortem examination, such as a homicide or accidental death, according to Kentucky law.

At the scene, Lee and Elmore explained coroners may have to make the decision to call police to the scene, request an autopsy be performed, speak with the deceased's physician or draw bodily fluids when drugs are believed to be involved.

"There's a lot of stuff that goes on behind scenes people don't know about," Lee said.

Though Kentucky law does not require coroners to have a medical license, he said they must complete 18 hours of continued education each year to maintain certification.

In addition to the expertise and skill displayed at the scene, the coroner said the staff's years of experience also comes into play in their ability to interact with other agencies. Investigating a death is a team effort by the coroner, law enforcement and emergency officials, he said.

"It takes all of us," Lee said. "There's not one agency that knows all the answers."

Paul's TV ad starts soon for tea party candidate

By ROGER ALFORD

The Associated Press

FRANKFORT — U.S. Sen. Rand Paul promoted his tea party protégé Thomas Massie in a TV ad that's expected to begin airing Monday night, saying he "will make a difference in Washington."

Paul weighed in after U.S. Rep. Geoff Davis and former U.S. Sen. Jim Bunning endorsed one of Massie's opponents, state Rep. Alecia Webb Edgington, in the May 22 primary.

The endorsement came the same day that all seven Republican congressional candidates are to appear in a debate scheduled to air statewide at 8 p.m. EDT on the public television station KET.

Say goodbye to old fridges, freezers with new KU program

Customers could earn $30

By KELLY CANTRALL

kcantrall@thenewsenterprise.com

Kentucky Utilities customers interested in a lower energy bills and clearing space in their houses can do both with a new program through the company.

LG&E and KU have launched a Fridge and Freezer Recycling Program in which customers can have an old, inefficient refrigerator or freezer hauled away and properly recycled, and earn $30 in the process.

The energy companies introduced the program as a way to help customers manage their energy costs as well as the companies' costs, spokeswoman Liz Pratt said.

Along with reducing energy costs by disposing of the appliances, the program ensures refrigerators won't end up in landfills, Pratt said. The appliance parts will be recycled and reused.

Pratt said people often hold on to old appliances because they don't want to have to bother with getting rid of them. This program eliminates that barrier. The companies have partnered with Louisville recycling center ARCA Inc.

"The customer doesn't have to worry about doing that manual work themselves," Pratt said.

To qualify for the program, the refrigerator or freezer has to be full-sized at 7.75 cubic feet or larger. It needs to be working and be accessible so it can be moved.

To set up an appointment, customers can log in through their online accounts at www.lge-ku.com or call the energy efficiency program at 1-800-356-5467. Two appliances can be taken in a calendar year.

The program is one of several in the companies' Energy Efficiency portfolio, which was approved by the Kentucky Public Service Commission in November 2011. The programs have the ability to reduce 500 megawatts of demand by 2018, the companies said.

Couple accused of going through purses at church

Metro Louisville police say they've arrested a woman and man who were going through purses during a church service.

WHAS-TV cited a police report that said witnesses saw Kendal A. Peters, 18, and Benjamin T. Welsh, 22, looking through purses at 2nd Presbyterian Church during Sunday services. Police were called and said they found stolen items on the couple that included an iPhone, a knife and cash.

Police said Peters offered to have sex with officers if they didn't arrest her. She is charged with receiving stolen property, resisting arrest, fleeing on foot and attempted bribery.

Welsh was charged with theft by unlawful taking.

It was unclear Monday whether Peters and Welsh had attorneys.

Medicaid provider reverses drug decision

A Medicaid provider has reversed its decision to discontinue paying for an expensive medication that helps drug addicts.

Attorney Anna Whites said she was notified Monday by lawyers for Medicaid provider Coventry Cares it will continue to pay for Suboxone. Whites represents SelfRefind, which operates addiction treatment centers in Kentucky.

Coventry spokesman Mat Eyles said in an email Monday the company will continue covering Suboxone and similar medicines and has asked to meet with the state, SelfRefind and others to talk about the best practices for addiction recovery treatment.

Suboxone often is given to opioid addicts who are dependent on drugs such as OxyContin and Vicodin. Coventry last week notified patients who receive Suboxone it wouldn't pay for treatment after the patient's current prescription expired.

Festival for shelter lacks attendance

Fundraising efforts continue

By AMBER COULTER
acoulter@thenewsenterprise.com

The latest fundraiser for a new Hardin County Animal Shelter didn't meet fundraising expectations.

Diane Shoffner, marketing and donation coordinator for PAWS, remains confident the community will contribute the estimated $900,000 remaining of the $1 million the organization has set out to raise to complete outfitting the building on Peterson Drive in Elizabethtown bought to house the new shelter.

About $2,300 was raised at Saturday's Mutts, Moms and Music Festival, the kickoff event for PAWS' shelter fundraising this year.

About 50 pets and their owners participated in the event's 2K walk, a quarter of the number of dogs expected to participate.

The Mutt Strutt event in September raised about $12,000, so Saturday's event wasn't as successful as organizers hoped.

The relatively low turnout was likely the result of competition with college graduations, the American Cancer Society's Relay for Life in Elizabethtown and other events throughout the county, Shoffner said.

Shoffner hopes community members will see the challenges PAWS is facing with fundraising and rededicate themselves to supporting and raising money for the project.

"The bottom line is we need $1 million to complete the building," she said.

Replacing the outdated building on Nicholas Street in Elizabethtown will allow the shelter to hold twice as many animals and increase adoptions and sterilization services, Shoffner said.

Reaching that goal will happen faster if more community members rally behind the cause financially. There are already many loyal supporters, she said.

"I think you'll see it in their eyes and hear it in what they say, how they feel about supporting us," she said.

Fundraising efforts will almost certainly take a couple of years, Shoffner said.

"Most people expect it to happen overnight," she said.

Festival participants seemed to have a good time listening to live local music, getting their faces painted, visiting vendor booths and participating in other activities, Shoffner said.

"I think they had a really fun day with their pets," she said.

An ongoing shelter fundraising effort is the compilation of a photo book featuring local pets.

Participating owners will be charged a fee based on how the pets are featured. All species and deceased pets can be included in the book.

Books are expected to be available for purchase in November for $30.

For more information, contact Shoffner at 766-1955 or Holly Stapleton at 319-2331.

There also is a Mutt Strutt planned to take place in September.

Organizers plan to apply for grants and ask potential business and private donors to sponsor rooms within the new shelter to raise money.

Donations can be made to the foundation on the PAWS website, www.pawsdonations.org, or mailed to P.O. Box 1116, Elizabethtown, KY 42702.

Farmer could face scrutiny from ethics panel

By ROGER ALFORD
The Associated Press

FRANKFORT — A former University of Kentucky basketball player who later turned to politics is facing allegations of wrongdoing that could lead to an ethics investigation, an official said Monday.

The Executive Branch Ethics Commission met Monday in Frankfort, some two weeks after the release of a scathing audit report that accused Farmer, who served eight years as state agriculture commissioner, of using state employees on state time to take him hunting and shopping, build a basketball court in his backyard, mow his lawn, and even chauffeur his dog.

Commission executive director John Steffen said he could neither confirm nor deny an investigation by the ethics panel, which typically releases information only if members find fault.

"I can't reveal what we're going to do, but we do take those kinds of allegations seriously," Steffen said.

Farmer also was accused in the audit of failing to publicly disclose gifts, including concrete for the basketball court, as state ethics laws require.

"There are some pretty serious allegations in there," Steffen said Monday.

A team of state auditors discovered what they believed to be misuse of state resources in the Kentucky Department of Agriculture during Farmer's administration.

State Auditor Adam Edelen said some of the allegations in the audit involve potential criminal wrongdoing. Farmer's attorney, Guthrie True of Frankfort, dismissed the audit as "very political and self-serving" and said he'd be shocked if criminal charges were pursued.

Farmer, who played on the legendary 1992 University of Kentucky basketball team dubbed "The Unforgettables," breezed through two elections for agriculture commissioner but lost a race for lieutenant governor when questions began to arise about his management of the Department of Agriculture.

Edelen sent the audit report to Kentucky Attorney General, Internal Revenue Service, Kentucky Department of Revenue, Office of Inspector General of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, and the State Personnel Board, which also was meeting in Frankfort on Monday to consider opening an investigation.

The auditors said Farmer directed his staff to order excessive numbers of gifts, including rifles, rifle cases, knives, cigar boxes, shopping mall gift cards and watches for a conference he hosted. They said Farmer took most of the items home after the conference, including 13 rifles, seven of which he later returned to the state.

Same-sex couple, school at odds over prom

The Associated Press

LEXINGTON — A same-sex couple and a Roman Catholic high school are at odds over whether the teenagers should have been allowed to go to the prom together.

Lexington Catholic High School senior Hope Decker and sophomore Tiffany Wright had already gotten their dresses for the dance, but were told Friday afternoon by school administrators that they couldn't attend.

Wright, 16, said school administrators cited the Catholic Church's stance on same-sex relationships.

"I would understand and respect the school's decision if they truly uphold church teachings," Wright said. "They didn't forbid the entrance of all the couples who've had premarital sex and all the kids who planned to get drunk after the prom."

Lexington Catholic president Steve Angelucci said the school's policies and procedures reflect the church's teachings on the issue.

"As a Catholic high school, we uphold every teaching of the Catholic Church," Angelucci said.

The Diocese of Lexington issued a statement Monday supporting the school administrators' decision and also said it was consistent with the church's teachings.

"The church empathizes with those who struggle with same-sex attraction, but, at the same time, the church and its institutions, like Lexington Catholic, cannot condone or promote actions which normalize homosexual tendencies," the statement said. "This in no way detracts from the value and dignity of the students involved. In light of Catholic teaching, the actions of the Lexington Catholic High School administration were a corrective invitation to the students involved to embrace their truest human dignity as children of God."

When the couple tried to enter the school's gymnasium Saturday night where the prom was held, they were turned away, so Wright said they held their own prom in the school's parking lot.

Mark Alexander became addicted to storage auctions long before A&E's hit show "Storage Wars" made them popular.

The 27-year-old has become so good at bidding and turning a profit he opened Alexander Gold & Trade on Frankfort's Louisville Road – an everything store where he sells his best finds.

"Pretty much everything I have in this store comes from a storage auction," he said. "It's a little bit strange, because you're gaining from someone else's loss, but in a way you're helping them pay for something they defaulted on."

When people keep storage bins but can't pay for them, lot owners take away their keys and put the bins up for public sale. Auction day, the auctioneer throws open the door to each bin and the crowd gets about 5 minutes to peek at the merchandise without entering the bin. The agreement is to buy the whole bin with one bid – most of which is unseen.

Every box, every bin could hold a treasure or junk.

"I'm a little bit of a gambler, so it's fun for me," Alexander said. "If I go more than two weeks without an auction, I don't feel quite right."

Whoever wins the bin is responsible for removing everything from that unit or they lose a deposit. In the worst-case scenario, this means shelling out hundreds to haul away a bunch of junk.

"At the beginning, I let the gamble get a hold of me too much," Alexander said. "Early on, I paid $200 for a unit and trashed the whole thing. I thought there would be something, but there was nothing."

Now, he only bids as high as he can see, and anything else he finds after the win is a bonus.

Looks can be deceiving, though. He once bid more than $1,000 for a bin because he saw Remington boxes and assumed there were guns inside.

He outbid an older gentleman, only to be laughed at. The boxes were empty. He lost about $900 on that gamble.

Fire destroys Butler County factory

By C. JOSH GIVENS
The Banner-Republican

A massive fire Friday morning destroyed a furniture parts and wood products factory on Butler County's Clarks Landing Road, taxing the resources of firefighters from six regional fire departments as well as Butler County's water system.

Fire officials began responding to the lumber-fueled fire at Superior Packaging Products at 290 Clarks Landing Road just before 6 a.m., with Morgantown, First District, Second District, Rochester, and Fourth District Fire Departments from Butler County on-scene, along with Hadley and Barren River Fire Departments from Warren County.

The company produces furniture components, pallets and other wood products, as well as having a separate sawmill. The sawmill was not damaged.

Morgantown Firefighter Tim Hampton said an employee opening the large shop for the day's shift discovered the fire as he entered a door from the outside. The employee saw flames in the area of one of the plant's saws in what was the back portion of the large metal building.

Firefighters pumped about 40,000 gallons of water on the fire, which is estimated to have consumed about 430,000 board feet of lumber. Two tankers from Second District and Morgantown Fire Departments refilled several times at hydrants along nearby U.S. 231.

The company estimated losses of $750,000.

often friendly banter and it can get competitive. One trick Alexander uses is to roll a bunch of $1 bills in $100 bills to intimidate fellow bidders. He'll turn to them, flash the roll and say, "I can do this all day."

But Kentucky auctions are nothing like the rivalries shown on "Storage Wars," where big-personality, rough-mouthed thrift store owners outbid each other at storage units across Southern California.

While Alexander enjoys the show, he said it has made his job more difficult.

"When I first started about 3 years ago, there were anywhere from 5-10 people," he said. "Unfortunately, since that show has caught on, about 90-120 show up, and the prices go through the roof."

A bin that went for $250 now goes for $1,000 or more.

However, there's still profit to be made. He sells furniture – that's what most bins hold – as well as artwork, electronics, shop supplies, jewelry, DVDs, musical instruments, foreign money, silver coins and old bumper stickers.

Edwards trial judge limits key defense testimony

By MICHAEL BIESECKER
The Associated Press

GREENSBORO, N.C. — The judge overseeing the criminal trial of John Edwards will sharply curtail the testimony of a key witness for the defense as they try to prove he didn't break the law.

Edwards' lawyers had intended to call former Federal Election Commission chairman Scott Thomas as their first witness Monday morning, but prosecutors objected.

The jury left the room while Judge Catherine C. Eagles listened to his testimony.

Thomas said it was his opinion nearly $1 million secretly used to hide Edwards' pregnant mistress as he campaigned for the White House did not qualify as campaign contributions under federal law.

The judge ruled Thomas won't be allowed to say that in front of the jury.

Edwards has pleaded not guilty.

Pennsylvania and Vermont.

Coca-Cola is providing the opportunity for high school students from areas hit by the earthquake and tsunami to explore the U.S. firsthand and broaden their knowledge of other cultures.

The program is being administered by EIL Japan, a non-profit educational exchange organization, in coordination with the Center for Cultural Interchange, a nonprofit organization that promotes cultural understanding, academic development and world peace.

The program is part of the Tomodachi Initiative, a partnership brokered by the U.S. and Japan as a way to strengthen cultural and economic ties and deepen friendships between the two countries.

Whisper Teel, a local coordinator for CCI based in Elizabethtown, said the students will fly into Washington, D.C., for a two-day group tour of the city, dis-bursing from there to fly to their respective host cities. The students are scheduled to stay in Elizabethtown from July 25 to Aug. 7.

While in Kentucky, Teel said, the students will explore historical spots and regional attractions, including Churchill Downs, Abraham Lincoln's birthplace, Mammoth Cave, the Louisville Slugger Museum and My Old Kentucky Home State Park.

Teel said the students also will take English classes and complete a community service project in Elizabethtown.

During their stay, she added, they will live with host families willing to open their home to the students as they learn.

Teel said CCI is looking for about 16 host families locally and the process is not exclusive. Single parents, families with or without children and "empty nesters" are all welcome.

"It gives them a feel for what American life is," Teel said of the host family experience.

Families interested in hosting a student will have to complete a background check and provide the students with three meals a day, including items they can pack for lunches during excursions.

Students also will require their own bed that is not convertible in nature and can share rooms with other children so long as they are of the same sex and are 8 years old or older.

Once a family successfully completes a background check, Teel said she will set up an in-home interview to ensure the living arrangements are suitable.

Teel said she is in charge of all transportation for trips and classes, but families are permitted to accompany students.

"The host families are welcome to participate in any festivities they want to do," she said. "They're just not required to."

Packets of information including a photo of the student will be presented to families and they can choose a student they want to accept into their home, she said. Teel said the families also can correspond with their student before he or she arrives in the U.S.

As part of the experience, Elizabethtown Mayor Tim Walker has offered use of the city pool during one night of the students' visits for a pool party, Teel said.

Teel said coordinators around the country were asked to submit a proposal explaining why their area was worthy to be chosen as one of the host cities. Teel said she pointed out the number of historical attractions in Kentucky and the state's connection with Japan through companies such as Akebono and Toyota.

"I just had to convince them to come to Elizabethtown and they did," she said.

The connection between Elizabethtown and Japan runs even deeper.

Elizabethtown's sister city, Koori Machi, is just north of Fukushima, Japan, and was affected by the earthquake and tsunami as homes were destroyed and a school was damaged.

In response, the city sent thousands of dollars in aid following the disaster.

Walker said he ranks the students' visits this summer with its relationship to Koori Machi and he said the city plans to renew a program in which it sends students from each city to visit the other.

"Because of the tsunami, that was put on hold," he said.

LIBRARY: Weeding out books is typical of rearrangement

Decreasing the number of print reference books in the branches also means space can be used for other purposes, she said.

A young adult section is planned to eventually take up space currently used by the reference section in the branch on Jim Owen Drive in Elizabethtown.

Recent rearranging at the branch on South Logsdon Parkway in Radcliff means some of the little-used reference books there already have been removed from the collection.

Such weeding of books is typical when things are rearranged in libraries, Hutcheson said.

"That happened really without being a conscious decision," she said.

Recently released state statistics show the library system in Hardin County has about one-third of the suggested amount of square footage between its branches as what is suggested for the population they serve.

Changing the reference sections won't create more physical space, but it will help make sure the space available is used wisely, Hutcheson said.

The changes are expected to occur gradually as money becomes available to buy online materials.

The most-used books will be replaced first, Hutcheson said.

"We can't afford to do anything drastically all at one time," she said.

OBAMA CAMPAIGN SAYS ROMNEY'S RECORD AT BAIN OFFERS WINDOW INTO HOW HE'D RUN THE COUNTRY.

President Barack Obama tried Monday to tarnish Mitt Romney as a corporate titan who got rich by cutting rather than creating jobs, opening a new effort to undercut the Republican's claims that his background of business success is just what America needs in a time of deep economic uncertainty.

At the center of the Obama campaign effort are a new website, TV ad and online video including interviews with onetime workers at a Kansas City, Mo., steel mill Romney's former private equity firm failed to successfully restructure. Workers lost jobs and health care benefits. Pensions were reduced.

"It was like a vampire. They came in and sucked the life out of us," said steelworker Jack Cobb. Add John Wiseman: "Bain Capital walked away with a lot of money they made off this plant. We view Mitt Romney as a job destroyer."

Countering the criticism, Romney's campaign said the former Massachusetts governor welcomes an election-season conversation with Obama about jobs. In fact, Romney alone helped spur more public and private jobs than Obama has for the nation, the Republican campaign argues.

Both candidates are seeking to pivot to voters' No. 1 issue, the economy, and away from the social issues that dominated af-

Closing schools
creates adventuresISSUE: Meade shutters two elementariesOUR VIEW: District faced difficult decision

After a long school year of early mornings, pop quizzes, homework, testing and more testing, most students, parents and educators look forward to the last day of school.

It's a time of celebration: The completion of another year of learning and growing and the unofficial start of summer.

However, the faces probably won't be very jubilant Wednesday in Muldraugh or Battletown when the bell rings for the very last time at two community elementary schools in Meade County. After more than 150 years of service, these two schools will close permanently.

A variety of factors led the Meade County School Board to this difficult decision, including budget cuts of more than $1 million in the past two years and declining enrollment at these small schools.

Despite being loved and cherished by their communities, the board had to choose function over feelings. The district has newer, more modern elementaries that will embrace the Muldraugh and Battletown students, giving the approximately 180 children impacted and their families a new place to call home.

The good news is tenured staff of the two closing schools will be reassigned within the district, which provides a friendly, familiar face to transferring students and will keep good teachers and administrators onboard.

Fingers are crossed that non-tenured employees will find a position within the school district as well.

Small schools in small towns are often the focal point for social activities, extracurricular programming and family fun. Few other facilities provide a connection for the community like the schoolhouse, where friends are made, life lessons learned and traditions are created.

Muldraugh and Battletown school buildings have the potential to be repurposed and brought back to life. Perhaps local government officials or a private investor will see the value in these brick legends and revive them.

The city of Lebanon purchased a former junior high school and created a beautiful facility that serves as a community meeting place for residents, as well as housing the Chamber of Commerce and tourism offices. In Scottsville, a Family YMCA restored and revitalized a former schoolhouse. In nearby LaRue County, new uses recently have been found for former schools in Buffalo and Magnolia.

The ending of the school year is always bittersweet but the silver lining is that exciting adventures lie ahead. Yes, transitions can be tough and the territory unfamiliar, but new situations and new schools create exciting opportunities and learning experiences. And that's what education is all about.

This editorial represents a consensus of The News-Enterprise editorial board.

Paying a fair share

I have heard quite a bit lately from President Barack Obama and his supporting cast of shills attacking those who have been successful and claiming that they need to pay their fair share."

After 10 years as a professional tax preparer, I will agree there are many who need to pay "their fair share." For those of you who have had to pay taxes, it might interest you to know 47 percent of American workers did not pay one dime in income tax. A large number of that group were also able to qualify for the Federal Earned Income Tax Credit and Additional Child Tax Credit allowing them to celebrate a second Christmas with checks averaging $4,000 to $6,000.

What is the cost of this to taxpayers? Estimates run from $44 billion to $47 billion each year and this is in addition to all of the other welfare programs our tax dollars are funding. I guess this can best be explained by the words of Karl Marx, "From each according to his abilities, to each according to his needs." If you like this along with the trillion dollar deficits and over $16 trillion in debt it has brought, enjoy it while it lasts. But if what you want is a tax that is truly fair, I invite you to check out the Fair Tax. It's time for everyone to start paying their fair share.

Hardin County
should back Bryan

Primary Election Day is quickly approaching and voters should follow Kendrick Bryan's campaign. The candidate is running for state representative.

I have known Bryan for more than 10 years, and I can tell you he has the passion we need in Frankfort. Bryan is a proud graduate of Central Hardin High School, where we were active in the tennis program until we graduated in 2005.

We were roommates at Western Kentucky University. I saw Bryan's service to the university, and he was honored to win the Charles Keown Award and the Dero Downing Award.

Bryan has worked for Hardin County Schools and LaRue County Schools, and he is dedicated to the Lady Hawks volleyball program. He also advised an award-winning Y-Club delegation.

Bryan is the strongest candidate in the race because of his platform. He is the only contender willing to discuss the legislature's main setbacks: budgeting, redistricting and transparency.

Bryan has laid out proposals to help manage these issues. The commonwealth needs to discuss budgeting and redistricting in open hearings. We also need a commission to oversee redistricting because our legislators wield too much influence over the process.

Voters need to know who is visiting our legislators and if any groups are contributing to our public servants. Bryan is taking a significant stance by opposing special interest groups and political action committees. He also pledged to post his voting record and expenses on a new website.

On May 22, enhance the Heartland and elect Bryan to be our next state representative.

Balanced Senate postal reform bill is best

Now that the U.S. Senate has passed bipartisan S 1789 to reform the ailing U.S. Postal Service, critics are trying to disable the bill on its way to the House. Both postal unions and USPS want more for their side and some Republicans mistakenly believe the bill burdens taxpayers.

Unfortunately, Kentucky Sens. Mitch McConnell and Rand Paul both bought into that logic and opposed 1789.

Rep. Darrell Issa, R-Calif., whose House bill awaits action, blasted "special interests." But Business Week says, "Considering how many people are unhappy with the bill, it isn't clear which special interests Issa is referring to."

S 1789 provides tools to

help ensure the survival of the Postal Service, the circulatory system for a $1.1 trillion mailing industry – making sure cash, greeting cards, packages, newspapers and magazines arrive on time.

Consider some of the alternative fixes.

Issa's bill immediately would end Saturday mail, close half the mail processing centers – including all but Louisville in Kentucky – and thousands of post offices and put a new board of political appointees in charge to trim workers' benefits and wages. It would direct the Postal Service to favor profit over service, which will frighten away business mail.

At the other extreme are Sen. Bernie Sanders, I-Vt., who wanted to keep everything open, the labor unions who say the USPS will heal as the economy heals and the White House solution: raise rates.

For Sens. Susan Collins, R-Maine, Joe Lieberman, I-Conn., and co-sponsors Tom Carper, D-Del., and Scott Brown, R-Mass., the extremes do little to ensure the Postal Service's long-term survival.

S 1789 encourages a more flexible, less costly workforce. It would keep mail flowing while cutting costs. It would allow plant closures if the USPS maintains local mail delivery speed.

S 1789 provides a different vision. Consider:

■ The the Postal Service's plant-closing plan would amass mail at automated urban centers, where costly machines sit idle much of the day. To optimize machine usage, the Postal Service would haul mail much farther.

But the haul would slow the mailstream, particularly in rural areas far from metro plants. It would make rural Kentuckians second-class citizens who would get and send mail more slowly than urban dwellers and hamper smaller communities' quests for economic development.

■ Many say they wouldn't miss Saturday mail. Who would be hurt by a five-day delivery scheme? Anyone who depends on timely mail delivery. Shutting down the system two days a week – three on Monday holidays – would slow deliveries for those who need prescriptions delivered; resident who get newspapers by mail and businesses needing six-day cash flows.

■ Closing small post offices seems a no-brainer. But the Postal Service could have circuit-rider postmasters to open offices a few hours a day, maintaining communities' links to the world.

■ The Congressional Budget Office says 1789 would cost $33.6 billion. But postage-payers, not taxpayers, carry this burden. Taxpayers face liability as the funder-of-last-resort only if postal revenues dry up – which is more likely to happen if mail slows to a crawl.

Finally, members of Congress differ on how they see the Postal Service. Is it a corporation or a government agency responsible for binding the nation together?

Fact: It is a government-sponsored enterprise, more like Fannie Mae than IBM or the Defense Department. It has to use business tools, but carry out a public mission.

The Postal Service has enormous power in the marketplace.

CENTER: ‘Let’s not go to that rodeo until we have some horses’

Heritage Council and downtown merchants before proceeding with the proposal as part of his budget.

“That’s about as far away from unified government as I’ve ever seen,” he said.

Ashlock’s comments during the council’s working session followed a letter sent by the city last Thursday to Berry and the eight magistrates indicating its desire to work in cooperation on a project that would keep county offices downtown.

Berry said the county has not finalized a location for the new center but said numerous times he would like to build the center near the intersection of Ring and Rineyville Roads because it would be a more centralized location and would offer space for future expansion.

Berry also said he has no obligation to discuss county business with Elizabethtown officials because the center is not their concern.

The council distanced itself from discussions about unified government but said it would like to arrange a meeting with Hardin Fiscal Court before a final decision is made on the budget.

Councilman Ron Thomas said the city should not initiate new talks about unification because Fiscal Court must cast the vote to form the unification review commission.

“Let’s not go to that rodeo until we have some horses,” Thomas said. “We don’t have a horse.”

Walker echoed Thomas and said unification is a moot point if the county does not take action regarding the commission.

But Councilman Kenny Lewis and others said they are open to sitting down and discussing the county government center with Fiscal Court even though they were not convinced it would lead to results.

“We’re probably just whistling into the wind because we’re not going to get any cooperation whatsoever,” Lewis said.

Thomas said the city has gone “above and beyond” in sending the letter and he believes the council should leave the issue to the discretion of the mayor.

Walker said the city can give Fiscal Court a few more days to respond and then reach out and inquire about a meeting.

An 18-year-old Utah man was arrested on suspicion of burglary after police say he left his homework at the crime scene.

Police in Orem, Utah, tracked a USB drive found at a burglarized home to Dallas Najjahih. They said the drive contained his homework and was in a backpack abandoned in the backyard.

A 75-year-old man and his wife reported their home burglarized Saturday. Police said Najjahih was found asleep at his house along with evidence connecting him with the burglary.

Members of Congress who mistakenly see postal reform as an exercise in deregulation actually may unleash a powerful federal agency while those who look to raise postage so generous worker benefits can continue could derail the engine that keeps jobs alive.

What’s needed is a clear-eyed vision and a full understanding of the needs of all the Postal Service serves. Postal management today has an impossible task, expected to accomplish business goals without the cost-controls businesses have, expected to achieve government ends without federal support.

Congress owns this confusion. Only Congress can fix it. Neither “deregulation,” rate hikes nor abrupt and disruptive approaches to labor costs will get the Postal Service to stability.

S 1789, on the other hand, provides crucial steps toward resolving issues the Postal Service faces.

scheduled to go on to Pathfinder and Army reconnaissance training, but he said he turned it down so he could be deployed with the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N.C.

“I wanted the experience as a leader in combat,” Pitcher said.

He said his goal is to be a green beret or a platoon leader in the 75th ranger regiment.

On Feb. 15, he was deployed and not long thereafter, he became a platoon leader, less than a year after being commissioned.

Exactly two months after deployment, Pitcher and his platoon were patrolling a village in southern Afghanistan known for IED production, he said. They successfully cleared it without casualties and discovered numerous weapons and IED materials.

At 6:30 a.m. the next day, he said he volunteered to check on security teams and stepped on a small IED.

“Unfortunately, my first thought was I just lost my platoon that I worked so hard to get over the last year,” said Pitcher, who was awarded the Purple Heart.

The former ECU Cadet was at the event to see his fiancée, Michelle Smith, receive a degree in social work.

dent remembers waking up at 2 a.m., April 15 to a frantic phone call from his son.

“He said, ‘Dad, I’m sorry, but I blew myself up,’” Randy Pitcher said. “Those are the most terrifying words to hear your son say.”

In addition to Josh, the family has a second son who is deployed in Afghanistan.

By April 18, Josh Pitcher was in Walter Reed Naval Hospital in Bethesda, Md. His foot was amputated in Germany, and he lost another 10 inches below the knee after conferring with doctors in Maryland.

Pitcher was advised the additional amputation was necessary to be fitted for a prosthetic, he said, which he needs if he wants to get back to running and jumping out of an aircraft. Pitcher’s father called his son’s decision “admirable.”

“I wouldn’t be able to get back to what I love to do,” Josh Pitcher said.

Since the surgery, the second lieutenant has flown to Richmond in the personal aircraft of Gen. David M. Rodriguez, U.S. Armed Forces Command commander, to see his fiancée, Michelle Smith, graduate from ECU. He made the trip two weeks after surgery against the wishes of his doctors, he said.

He was scheduled to have stitches removed Monday and is in the process of transitioning from inpatient to outpatient treatment, which Pitcher called “a huge step for me right now.”

On Monday, Smith was on her way to Maryland to serve as Pitcher’s caregiver, he said. Since his return to the states, Pitcher has been in the company of his mother, Vicky, who also is retired from the military.

“My mom’s been the best help,” he said.

will receive his prosthetic at which time he will begin the slow process of learning to walk and run again, he said. The airborne ranger is determined to get back to jump status.

He intends to reach that goal by November or December.

Lt. Col. Ralph Hudnall, professor of military science at ECU, said the Army has loosened its restrictions about serving after losing a limb.

The professor said if anyone can obtain jump status after losing the lower leg, it would be Pitcher.

“He was inspirational before this even happened,” Hudnall said.

Randy Pitcher said he has “mixed emotions” about the spring’s rollercoaster of events.

“We lost a part of his leg, but we didn’t lose our son,” the father said.

DEAR ABBY

Golfer who improves his life must learn to tell the truth

Dear Abby: One of my friends, “Max,” cheats at golf. Otherwise he’s witty, interesting and fun to be around. He moves his ball closer to the hole on the green and “improves” his lie when he thinks no one is looking. I have tried to overlook Max’s transgressions, but others in our golf group talk and joke behind his back. How should I go about stopping the problem without stressing our friendship? – Florida Golfer

■ Dear Golfer: What you have described is considered a terrible breach of golf etiquette. What it shows about Max is a serious lack of ethics. Because you feel close to him, take him aside and tell him privately as a friend it’s time to knock off the cheating because the others are onto him, and he’s making himself a laughingstock.

DO YOUR BOOK CLUB HOMEWORK. Dear Abby: I have been part of a book club for almost 20 years. We began as a group of six teachers who wanted to share our friendship and love of reading. Over the years, members have come and gone, but five of the original group remains. We’re now a group of nine.

Our dilemma is many of the women don’t bother to read the monthly selection but still attend the meetings. Granted, the meetings are very social. Everyone brings food to enjoy while we discuss books and anything else going on in our lives. However, the core group finds it annoying when some members don’t even attempt to read. It happens month after month.

We have said on many occasions we expect everyone to read. Our discussions are livelier and more interesting when everyone shares her thoughts, but some don’t make the effort or threaten to drop out of the book club.

We don’t want anyone to drop out. We are all friends. Are we expecting too much because as teachers we regard it as a “homework assignment” not being completed? What can we do? I’d like your opinion so I can share it at the book club. – Pennsville, N.J., Reader

■ Dear Reader: If certain members of your book club are no longer doing the required reading and regard the gatherings as social affairs, why not make some of the meetings – say, every other month – devoted solely to discussing the book you are reading, while the rest will be strictly social? There will be less disappointment for the readers, and you can still meet as friends without anyone being inconvenienced.

‘TWEEN 12 & 20

My stepdad is wonderful

Dr. Wallace: I’m 15 and live with my mom. My parents divorced several years ago. My dad stays in touch with me, even though he lives over 1,000 miles away. My mom is going to marry a guy she has been seeing for over a year. I haven’t warmed up to him for two main reasons. First, I love my dad very much and nobody can take his place. Next, my best friend has a stepmother and she hates this woman with a passion. Somehow I think teens and stepparents don’t get along very well.

My mom’s new husband-to-be is OK, but to tell you the truth, I wish they would break up before they get married and then he would move to Mars. Do most teens have difficulty in adjusting to a stepparent? If so, I might try to talk my dad into letting me move in with him and his golden lab. Dad was smart. He didn’t remarry. – Kim, Tulsa, Okla.

■ Kim: I would urge you not to prejudice your mother’s fiancé. Accepting him into your life is not a betrayal of your father, who always will be your father no matter what. The new “dad” in your life is not a replacement for the old one – but if you give him half a chance, he may be a positive addition to your life as well as your mom’s.

Remember, stepparents come in all shapes, sizes, colors and personality types. Some are wonderful, caring and compassionate human beings. Please read the following letter from a young lady in your home state, who is overflowing with gratitude her stepfather became part of her family.

Dr. Wallace: I’m writing to change the myth stepparents are mean people who hate kids. About five years ago, my mother divorced our father. My father was an abuser. He beat my mother and us kids regularly. He was an alcoholic. When my mother divorced him, he was using drugs, too.

Six months after he left our house, he was killed in an automobile wreck. He was driving under the influence of alcohol. Two years after my father died, my mother started dating a man whose wife had died and he was raising a daughter my age. Six months after meeting, they got married. I was 12, and my twin brothers were 10. It’s difficult to put into words how wonderful this man is. He treated us all the same as he treated his own daughter and brought stability and love into our family at a time when it was desperately needed. My brothers and I love this man dearly and thank the good Lord he entered our lives. Having him for a stepfather was the best thing for our family.

Thanks, “Dad,” for entering our lives and for giving us all of your love and understanding. I want to announce to the world Mindy, Mike and Mitch all love you very, very much. – Mindy, Oklahoma City, Okla.

■ Mindy: Thanks for your inspiring story. Loving, caring, understanding people often come along just when you need them. And despite all rumors to the contrary, a good many of them are stepparents.

OIL WATCH

Oil starts week by hitting lowest level in 2012

The price of oil fell to its low for the year on continued doubts about some European countries ability to pay off massive government debts.

Benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude lost $1.35 to end the day at $94.78 per barrel in New York. That's the lowest level since Dec. 19.

Brent crude, which helps set the price for oil imported by U.S. refineries, gave up $1.26 to finish at $111 per barrel in London. Brent was last this low at the end of January.

Oil declined as a leadership crisis in Greece raised doubts that it would comply with a eurozone-supported plan to get out of debt. Analysts see Greece as a test case for whether cash-strapped European nations can slash spending and improve their economies. Europe consumes 18 percent of the world's oil.

"You have to ask yourself who's next after the Greeks," said Gene McGillian, a broker and oil analyst at Tradition Energy. "What happens if Spain or other countries have similar troubles?"

Oil prices have been declining for most of the past two weeks as European leaders wrestled the debt crisis. — AP

Coca-Cola tries again with mid-calorie sodas

By CANDICE CHOI
AP Food Industry Writer

NEW YORK — The Coca-Cola Co. is giving mid-calorie sodas another try, this time with Sprite and Fanta.

The Atlanta-based company says "Sprite Select" and "Fanta Select" will have about half the calories of regular. They will be made with a blend of sugar and other sweeteners, including Truvia and erythritol. The tests will take place this summer in a limited number of stores in Atlanta, Detroit, Louisville and Memphis.

Scott Williamson, a spokesman for Coca-Cola, noted there are no plans for a national rollout yet.

A 12-ounce can of regular Sprite has 140 calories and a can of regular Fanta has 160 calories; the new formulas both will have 70 calories a can.

PepsiCo Inc. earlier this year launched its Pepsi Next, which has half the calories of regular. But Coca-Cola's new drinks are different because they use what are considered natural sweeteners, said John Sicher, publisher of Beverage Digest, which first reported on the tests.

Truvia is made from a plant and erythritol is a sugar alcohol. Pepsi Next, by contrast, uses a mix of high fructose corn syrup and three artificial sweeteners used in past diet sodas.

BPI laying off 86 after 'pink slime' controversy

The maker of the beef product dubbed "pink slime" by critics said Monday it was laying off 86 employees from its corporate office in South Dakota, citing what it calls a misinformation campaign about a product food-industry experts agree is safe.

Beef Products Inc. executives initiated this second round of layoffs in response to intense negative publicity about the company's lean, finely textured beef. BPI has said it took a "substantial" financial hit after social media exploded with worry over the product and an online petition seeking its ouster from schools.

The company confirmed earlier this month it was closing its three plants in Kansas, Texas and Iowa, resulting in 650 lost jobs. A fourth plant in Nebraska will remain open but at reduced capacity.

MARKETWATCH MONDAY

STOCKS, EURO DROP AS DEADLOCK CONTINUES IN GREECE. A political stalemate in Greece rattled financial markets worldwide on Monday, driving U.S. stocks lower.

The euro sank to a three-month low against the dollar and borrowing costs for Spain and Italy jumped as bond traders anticipated financial stress could spread far beyond Greece. Investors dumped risky assets and plowed into the safety of the Treasury market, pushing yields to their lowest levels this year.

The Dow Jones industrial average dropped 125.25 points to close at 12,695.35.

Best Buy chairman steps down after CEO probe

By MAE ANDERSON
AP Retail Writer

NEW YORK — Best Buy's founder Richard Schulze is stepping down as chairman of the beleaguered consumer-electronics chain after the company's investigation revealed he failed to alert the board of directors when he learned the CEO was having an inappropriate relationship with a female employee.

Best Buy said Monday a probe it launched in March determined former CEO Brian Dunn, who resigned last month, violated company policy and showed poor judgment by having a "close personal relationship" with a subordinate.

The inquiry also found Schulze, who first heard about the relationship in December when another employee gave him a written statement, acted inappropriately by not telling human resources or the company's board about the allegations.

"I confronted him with the allegations (which he denied), told him his conduct was totally unacceptable and contrary to Best Buy's policies and everything I, and the company, stand for," Schulze said in a statement. "I understand and accept the findings."

The latest revelations are part of a scandal that couldn't have come at a worse time for the 46-year-old retailer. The company, which has more than 1,400 U.S. locations, is struggling to regain its footing as it faces increased competition from online retailers and discounters. Customers have all but abandoned buying at so-called "big box" stores like Best Buy.

Best Buy reported in March it widened its net loss to $1.7 billion, and the company announced a major restructuring. That included closing some of its big-box stores, cutting 400 corporate jobs and trimming $800 million in costs in addition to opening 100 smaller, more profitable locations.

Young corn may fare well in dry conditions

When does soil get too dry for young corn? Or when will you know the young corn seedlings will not make it? Variations of these questions have been coming in as the lack of rain continues and the temperatures rise on young corn plants. Although recent rains have eased worries of drought, some may still question how young corn will handle this early stress. The quickest and perhaps most practical answer is to scout fields regularly and identify areas where plants are not recovering from drought stress. In other words, the best indicator of when the plants will not make it is when they have died. Dr. Chad Lee, University of Kentucky Extension grain crops specialist, recently shared the following in-depth information regarding drought stress on young corn on the UK Grain Crops Blog.

The technical answer to the questions in the opening paragraph is that a soil gets too dry when the 'permanent wilting point' is reached - the level of soil moisture at which plants will fail to recover. Most plants will display drought symptoms long before the permanent wilting point is reached. Most silt loam soils reach the permanent wilting point around 8 percent moisture content, while a clay loam reaches the permanent wilting point around 10 percent moisture content. The permanent wilting point varies with temperature, compaction/structure/pore arrangement, and the resulting ability of the soil to conduct water.

There are sensors that can measure when soils get near the permanent wilting point. The challenge with a sensor is deciding where to put it. A person could put 20 sensors at 20 different depth increments and still not have the level of sensitivity each plant in the field has. So, practicality brings us back to field scouting. Observe the plants in the different soil types and identify if and when plants die. As long as the plants are living, they have a chance to be productive.

Small seedlings do not require a lot of water. The dry soil surface reduces the amount of evaporation from the soil and the plants are small so transpiration is low as well. Even in these dry conditions, water losses may be minimized. In addition, some of these soils are very dry on top but still have some deeper plant available water deeper. If the root system reaches that water, then there is a good chance for the plants to survive. If that root system has not reached the moisture, then the seminal root system (roots coming from the seed itself) could be compromised and these plants will be the first to show drought symptoms. If areas of the field express drought symptoms, the soil should be excavated around the plants both with and without symptoms to determine the location and behavior of the early seminal root system. From that, you can determine if compaction is inhibiting root exploration of deeper soil.

A young corn seedling has two root systems. When corn first germinates, it produces the seminal (or seed) root system. When the corn reaches V3, the nodal root system becomes active. The nodal root system develops above the seed but below the soil surface. If this area is dry, then the nodal root system could be compromised and we might see "floppy" corn later in the season.

Perhaps the final thing to consider is if the young corn plants survive the drought prior to the V4 to V5 growth stage, there probably is minimal long-term damage from the drought, meaning we would expect very little yield loss. At V6, tassel and ear development are starting, so drought stress from about V6 to tasseling will cause progressively more damage the closer the drought stress occurs to tasseling. Again, field scouting is our best tool in-season to assess drought stress.

KITCHEN ADVENTURES

Cooking from a galaxy far, far away ...

Warning, this food column could get a bit nerdy.

Before it dives into geekdom let's explore a new recipe found on Pinterest.

Cookies always are fun to make and there are so many recipes out there today that the possibilities are endless.

Rollo cookies are very easy with only four ingredients. Mix a box of devil's food cake mix with two eggs and one-third cup of oil. Then roll the dough in a ball around a piece of Rollos candy and bake.

The result is a gooey caramel center with a chocolatey outside.

Rollos are just one of many candies that can be used in cookie making. You just have to pick your favorite and experiment a little.

Now, here's where we are going to get nerdy, a recipe for Wookiee Cookies. That's right, Wookiee Cookies.

This recipe is from a cookbook called "The Star Wars Cookbook: Wookiee Cookies and other Galactic Recipes."

After you stop laughing at the absurd title of the book, you will discover this recipe, the only one I've ever made from the book, makes a delicious cookie.

It's basically a double chocolate cookie with cinnamon added. See, it's not weird, said the reporter with a giant Chewbacca Pez dispenser on her desk.

Twisting the typical chocolate chip cookie recipe always is a good idea. This one adds cinnamon but others will replace one of the chocolate chips with chocolate chunks or add a cut up candy bar, such as Snickers, for a different taste.

Some recipes even add bacon to chocolate chip recipes. Bacon makes everything better, right?

The secret, as in many cookies, is in the scoop. Using a cookie scoop to form large balls of cookie dough on the cookie sheet before placing it in the oven helps create a cookie that rises high in the middle and keeps a good shape.

In the end you have a warm cookie full of chocolate and cinnamon goodness. You don't have to tell people what they are called. We can keep that our little secret.

But if you do want to delve a little deeper in the world of "Star Wars," Williams Sonoma makes a cute variety of "Star Wars" cookie cutters, cookie presses, pancake molds and cupcake stencils.

Making something with a theme today is easier with the help of a little imagination and the Internet.

Continuing the spacey theme, I recently made Dalek cupcakes for a gathering of friends who like to watch "Doctor Who." All you need to know about Daleks are they are robot-looking evil things seeking to destroy. In cupcake form, they are not nearly as threatening.

Not everyone is going to want to make these cupcakes, but the idea is using a theme doesn't have to be as complicated or expensive as it seems.

Searching online can give you a multitude of ideas on how to create a theme party.

These cupcakes were relatively simple. Place one large cupcake upside down on some wax paper and ice it. Next, ice a mini cupcake and place it upside down on top of the larger cupcake. Then decorate. All that was needed for this one was pretzel sticks and old-fashioned candy buttons that come on sheets of paper.

Nothing fancy, but if you know a "Doctor Who" fan, they make a fun little treat.

Happy cooking and may the Force be with you.

A DASH OF GLASS

Plum and radicchio dishes

This week we find ourselves back on the alphabetical tour of fruits and vegetables. For the letters P and R, I chose plums and radicchio.

Plums are relatives of the peach, nectarine and almond.

They all are considered drupes — fruits that have a hard stone pit surrounding their seeds. When plums are dried, they are known as prunes. Plum season extends from May through October. Japanese varieties are first on the market in May and peak in August followed by European varieties in the fall.

Plums are high in vitamin C and low in calories. Plums have more than 2,000 varieties, but only 100 are available in the United States, according to www.whfoods.com. So if you are looking for a juicy, sweet-tasting fruit that comes in a panorama of colors, plums are for you.

Plums are classified into six general categories — Japanese, American, Damson, Ornamental, Wild and European/Garden — with varying size, shape and color. Although plums usually are round, they also can be oval or heart-shaped. The skins of plums can be red, purple, blue-black, red, green, yellow or amber, while their flesh comes in hues such as yellow, green, pink and orange.

Raw chopped radicchio often is in those bagged salad mixes. Until I did this research, I thought it was red cabbage. But here's the cool thing, radicchio is outstanding grilled. Something about the grilling on high heat transforms the bitterness and turns it a little nutty. Quarter radicchio heads, coat them with olive oil and sprinkle with salt, grill them until lightly charred all over. Chop them into salad sized pieces, toss them with dressing, and sprinkle on a little grated Parmesan cheese.

GRILLED RADICCHIO

2 heads of radicchio, quartered, with a bit of the stem holding it together
1/2 cup olive oil, plus more to coat radicchio

1/4 cup balsamic vinegar
1 teaspoon salt

3 chopped garlic cloves
1/2 teaspoon mustard
Salt and black pepper
Parmesan cheese for garnish

Make the dressing. Put the salt, garlic, mustard and balsamic vinegar into a food processor or blender and pulse to combine. With the motor running, drizzle in the olive oil slowly until the dressing comes together. Prepare your grill for high, direct heat. Coat quartered radicchio with olive oil and sprinkle with salt. Grill radicchio over high heat, uncovered. Keep an eye on them, as they blacken quickly. You want a little blackening, but not a cinder. When they're done, move to a bowl and bring inside to chop. Chop the radicchio quarters into bite-sized pieces and toss with the dressing and some black pepper.

Serve hot or at room temperature, garnished with grated parmesan cheese.

Adcock gets called back up by Royals

The Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Texas — Kansas City Royals left-hander Danny Duffy is facing the likelihood of Tommy John surgery after being diagnosed Monday with a torn ulnar collateral ligament in his pitching elbow.

Duffy was put on the 15-day disabled list the same day an MRI revealed the seriousness of the injury, and the Royals said he is expected to get a second opinion from Dr. Lewis Yocum in Los Angeles.

Duffy is the second Royals starter to go on the disabled list in less than a week. Right-hander Jonathan Sanchez was put on the 15-day DL last week with left biceps tendinitis.

The 23-year-old Duffy

(2-2, 3.90 ERA) faced only three batters in Sunday's 9-1 win over the Chicago White Sox. After catcher Humberto Quintero saw Duffy shake his arm after a throw, manager Ned Yost and a trainer visited the mound. Duffy was pulled when he said his elbow was the problem.

Duffy also experienced tightness in his elbow last month, forcing him to skip a turn in the rotation.

"The thing about these Tommy John surgeries nowadays, they're so efficient at doing them. Danny is going to come back even better, even stronger," Yost said before the opener of a two-game series in Texas. "It's just missing out on Danny's development for a year and Danny's production for a year which is what hurts. He was really starting to come into his own. ... He was throwing 95-97 mph, he had a great start and he's starting to learn how to command it."

Right-hander Nathan Adcock was recalled from Triple-A Omaha and righty Vin Mazzaro will start today against the Rangers in place of Sanchez.

"We want to see Vinny. We know what Nate can do," Yost said. "We're trying to sort some things out. We're looking for two starters. ... We got to give Vin a shot."

Adcock, a former North Hardin standout, had an ERA of 2.89 before being sent down to Omaha on Saturday. He gave up 14 hits and four walks in 9 1/3 innings, while striking out six. In two of his three outings, Adcock has pitched three or more innings.

Adcock was 3-1 with a 1.37 ERA in four starts at Omaha. He limited opponents to 16 hits and eight walks in 26 1/3 innings, while striking out 14. The 24-year-old right-hander made 24 appearances, including three starts, for Kansas City last season and was 1-1 with one save and a 4.62 ERA.

Duffy was drafted by the Royals in the third round in the 2007 draft and made his major league debut last season, going 4-8 with a 5.64 ERA in 20 starts. In six starts this season he had a team-leading 28 strikeouts in 27 2/3 innings. Sanchez went on the DL a day after he lasted only three innings in a loss at Boston on May 7. Sanchez (1-2, 6.75) was acquired in an offseason trade with San Francisco to bolster the starting rotation.

Under Armour founder Kevin Plank stands with Preakness Stakes entrant Tiger Walk at Sagamore Farm in Glyndon, Md., on April 27.

Under Armour founder preps for Preakness

By DAVID GINSBURG
AP Sports Writer

GLYNDON, Md. — After bucking the odds to become a major player in the sports apparel business, Kevin Plank is eyeing a similar role in horse racing.

Plank, the founder and owner of Under Armour, bought Sagamore Farm in 2007. The 530-acre training and breeding facility was once the home of Native Dancer, winner of the Preakness and Belmont in 1953. After spending millions of dollars to refurbish the farm, Plank is poised to take the next step in his bid to restore Maryland's rich racing tradition.

Having already produced a Breeder's Cup winner and a Belmont Stakes entrant at Sagamore Farm, Plank will enter Tiger Walk in Saturday's Preakness. His ultimate goal, however, is to develop a Triple Crown winner.

Plank figures Maryland, and Sagamore Farm in particular, is as good a place as any to breed the next great horse.

"I don't think there's anybody that owns the right," he said. "We haven't had a Triple Crown winner in 33 years. What other sport hasn't named a legitimate champion in 33 years? So that is far overdue, and no one in Kentucky has done it. These aren't God-given rights limited to growing up in Kentucky. Maryland has that kind of history with Man of War, War Admiral, Native Dancer. So why not us?"

Sagamore Farm made a profound impression on the sport in 2010 when Shared Account won the $2 million Breeders' Cup Fillies and Mares race. Last year, Monzon finished ninth in the Belmont.

And what of Tiger Walk, the fourth-place finisher in the Wood Memorial? Trained by Ignaco Correias, the dark bay son of Tale of the Cat will have two-time Preakness winner Kent Desormeaux in the saddle.

Morehead State introduces Woods as head coach

By COLIN FLY
AP Sports Writer

MOREHEAD — Sean Woods said it's a blessing to come home.

A beloved former Kentucky point guard, Woods was introduced Monday as the head coach of Morehead State after a four-year stint at Mississippi Valley State.

"I'm glad to be back here. This is home for me. This has been a long journey to come back. Sometimes it's good to go away to come back, some people appreciate you more, but I tell you this, it's not going to stop. The saga's going to continue, the story is going to continue," Woods said. "Let's bring national notoriety to Morehead State."

Woods said he envisioned a "Gonzaga of the South" at the Ohio Valley Conference school during his introductory news conference that at times bordered on a big-tent revival during his 16-minute opening remarks. Several times people in the crowd shouted "Amen" as the 42-year-old laid out his ambitious objectives.

"I've been fortunate enough because of who I am and the people I've been around that everywhere I've been, we've made some kind of history," Woods said. "I don't plan on it stopping right now. I plan on, with you all's help and support, taking this, not only to the NCAA tournament, not only being one of the top teams in the OVC, but being a major player."

Woods led Mississippi Valley State to a 21-13 mark this year and the school's fifth-ever NCAA Tournament appearance before they lost to Western Kentucky in the first round. He said Morehead State is much better off than where he was when he started at Itta Bena, Miss.

The Eagles have had a swath of recent success. Two seasons ago, Morehead State and defensive force Kenneth Faried topped Louisville in the second round of the NCAA Tournament with coach Donnie Tyndall at the helm.

The victory gave the school that's an hour away from the University of Kentucky and sits at the base of the Appalachians Mountains its first victory in the NCAA Tournament's main draw since 1984.

Area athletes could have a big weekend at state track

By JOSH CLAYWELL

jclaywell@thenewenterprise.com

Area athletes are in line for a big weekend in the KHSAA State Track and Field Championships at the University of Louisville.

If every seed holds, athletes would bring home a combined 56 medals when the state meets are held at Owsley Frazier Cardinal Park. Class 1-A is Thursday followed by 2-A on Friday and 3-A on Saturday.

Each meet starts at 1 p.m.

In 1-A, Fort Knox could win 16 medals. Senior Kiara Austin is ranked first in the 100-meter hurdles and long jump and second in the triple jump. She also anchors the second-ranked 1,600 relay team.

Senior Akio Tonge is seeded second in the 110 hurdles and eighth in the 300 hurdles, while senior Oscar Cruz is third in the 400 dash. Tonge and Cruz are also on the Eagles' top-ranked 1,600 team along with seniors Reed Johnson and Andre Wingate.

In 2-A, Elizabethtown could win 10 medals. Senior Jessica Gabhart is ranked first in the pole vault and sixth in the 300 hurdles, while freshman Darien Huff is third in the triple jump. Junior Madison Smith is seeded fourth in the 400 dash and sophomore Hannah Godfrey is sixth in the 1,600 run.

For the Panthers, senior Tyler Ginn is ranked fourth in the discus and sophomore James Washington is seventh in the 110 hurdles.

Senior Cody Thompson (300 hurdles, eighth) is the only LaRue County athlete ranked in the top eight.

The area's 3-A teams — Central Hardin, John Hardin, Meade County and North Hardin — combine for 29 top-eight competitors.

The North Hardin boys, who are shooting for their first state title since 2004, are ranked in the top four in every relay. Junior Bryce Meers and sophomore Dante Johnson are seeded in the top five in both hurdle events, while senior Josh Ortega and junior Kirk Oxendine are ranked second and fourth in the 400 dash.

Senior Katie Lever (3,200 run) is ranked first for John Hardin, which could win four medals. Junior Eric Avant is fourth in the 300 hurdles and fourth in the triple jump, while senior Alex Harber is fourth in the pole vault.

Central Hardin, meanwhile, is ranked in the top eight in three events. Senior Antoine Keys is seeded second in the 100 and fourth in the 200 dashes, while senior Malon Kennedy is eighth in the 300 hurdles.

Meade County is seeded in the top eight in two events. Senior Marley Stanfield is ranked sixth in the girls' 400 dash, while Meade County's boys' 1,600 relay team of seniors Tylor Pinkard, Dakota Waldecker, Dylan Massey and Mitchell Wills are seeded eighth.

IndyCar teams take cautious approach to practice sessions

By MICHAEL MAROT
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — IndyCar teams have used the first three practice sessions at Indianapolis as a virtual classroom.

They're collecting data about how their new cars react in different conditions on Indianapolis' 2.5-mile oval. They're trying to decipher fuel calculations. They're studying how the cars run in traffic and trying to keep the mileage down on engines and tires.

The combination has forced drivers into an unnatural game plan — taking things slowly.

"I feel like the car is responding well, and I think it's going to race well," Team Penske driver Ryan Briscoe said. "It's a new car, though, so we're still fairly conservative."

At first glance, slower speeds seem like the antithesis of what the Indianapolis 500 is all about.

During Saturday's pole qualifications, race officials will celebrate the 50th anniversary of Parnelli Jones breaking the 150 mph barrier. Tom Sneva is still revered as the man who broke the 200 mph barrier in 1977. Speeds kept increasing up until Arie Luyendyk set the four-lap qualifying average of 236.986 in 1996.

Series officials ditched the turbochargers in 1997, which brought speeds back down and eliminated one of Indy's feature attractions, breaking records.

Now, the turbochargers are back, but the records aren't being challenged.

The series has reduced the horsepower er at Indy from 650 last year to something less than that this year.

While league officials wouldn't say how much has been cut and team officials declined to offer a guess, it's clearly being reflected on the speed charts. By day three of practice last year, the top speeds were already hitting 225 mph, and Alex Tagliani won the pole with an average of 227.472.

This year's fastest practice lap was turned Monday by rookie Josef Newgarden at 222.486. Ryan Hunter-Reay was second at 221.639 and Marco Andretti was third at 221.519.

Those numbers are likely to climb, at least a bit.

"They're going to come back up by qualifying," Tagliani said. "I wouldn't be surprised if it will be close to my pole lap last year, depending on the weather."

Series officials have already announced they're adding enough horsepower to give cars a boost of 4-5 mph on Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Target Chip Ganassi Racing spent Saturday's opening practice breaking in backup cars. Team Penske, which has won all four races this season, was still working on race setup Monday and intends to do the same thing until Friday. Some cars have even run with full fuel loads to test their mileage. That's the reason Michel Jourdain Jr.'s car was towed into pit lane Monday after running out of fuel during a practice run.

Lotus engines have been slow all season and haven't shown any indication they'll perform any better at the first oval race of the season.

TENNIS

Ivanovic beats Kuznetsova at Italian Open

By ANDREW DAMPF
AP Sports Writer

ROME — In a matchup of former French Open champions, 13th-seeded Ana Ivanovic beat Svetlana Kuznetsova 6-4, 6-3 on Monday in a windy first-round match at the Italian Open.

"It was tough out there today but it was the same for both of us," said Ivanovic, who won her only major title at Roland Garros in 2008. "I just tried to move and to adjust and really tried to look at the ball and move forward. It was difficult at times and the gusts of wind would come out of nowhere, but it was a good match."

Ivanovic is approaching the top 10 again after a difficult stretch in her career that included four first-round losses at Grand Slams. She attributes part of her turnaround to her coach, Nigel Sears, after they started working together following Wimbledon last year.

"He is very calm and I am a perfectionist and sometimes I try to do too much at the same time, and so he is very reasonable when he comes onto the court ... so this helps me to calm down a lot," Ivanovic said.

In a night match at the Foro Italico, Francesca Schiavone was defeated in front of her home fans by 39th-ranked Ekaterina Makarova 6-3, 6-4.

Makarova dictated play with a series of angled baseline winners, while Schiavone, the 2010 French Open champion, had trouble finding the range for her highly technical game.

This tournament is the last major clay-court warm-up for the French, which starts in two weeks.

Also, 12th-seeded Angelique Kerber rallied past Australian qualifier Anastasia Rodionova 4-6, 7-5, 6-2, and Sofia Arvidsson of Sweden cruised past 2010 champion Maria Jose Martinez Sanchez 6-3, 6-2.

In men's action, ninth-seeded John Isner overcame a slow start to beat Philipp Kohlschreiber of Germany 2-6, 7-6 (3), 6-2. The 6-foot-9 American looked headed for an early exit before Kohlschreiber lost control when he was serving for the match at 5-4 in the second. Isner then broke again in the opening game of the third and cruised from there.

HORSE RACING

Derby runner-up Bodemeister heading to Preakness

By COLIN FLY
AP Sports Writer

LOUISVILLE — Bodemeister is headed to the Preakness to challenge I'll Have Another after their memorable finish in the Kentucky Derby.

Bodemeister set a blistering early pace in the Derby only to be caught in the final 100 yards by I'll Have Another and finish second, giving owner Ahmed Zayat his third runner-up finish in the race in the last four years. Zayat was on hand Monday to watch Bodemeister to make sure the horse was ready to travel to Baltimore for Saturday's race.

"He looks fantastic," Zayat said. "He couldn't look any better. In fact, he gained weight since Derby, which is amazing. ... My heart, he deserves a chance to come and redeem himself in an American classic, but you have to weigh that against the best interest of the horse. I wanted to come with my son Justin to see for myself that he is the same Bodemeister.

"He's actually doing better. He's happier."

Trainer Bob Baffert said Bodemeister came out of the Derby well. He's pleased with what he sees from the colt named after his 7-year-old son, Bode.

"After the race, I thought he'd be completely wiped out," Baffert said. "He cooled out pretty quick and was eating his hay in front of his stall. I was afraid he was going to go into hibernation for about three days in the corner of his stall with his ears pinned, sulking. But he never did.

"He's a pretty tough, amazing animal. His hair looks good. His weight looks good. Right now I don't see any reason not to take him."

Bodemeister with jockey Mike Smith aboard ran the opening quarter in :22.32 and a half in :45.39 at the Derby and had a three-lengths lead heading down the stretch before tiring as I'll Have Another caught him late.

The Kentucky Derby was Bodemeister's fifth career start, all this year. Still, he went from mostly unknown to the race favorite in a few short weeks after winning the Arkansas Derby by 9½ lengths at Oaklawn Park on April 14.

"Think about this, Bob keeps reminding me, three weeks before that (race) we didn't have a horse in the Derby," Zayat said. "We go from a Grade 1 to favorite in the Derby. That's a huge accomplishment. So, we were feeling sad because he ran a winner's race and not to get it, you feel bad for the horse. He ran such a brilliant race."

Baffert, a five-time Preakness winner, is less certain with his plans for Liaison, his other Derby entry that finished sixth. Baffert said he wanted to talk to Liaison's owner, Arnold Zetcher, before making a decision.

"I want to see what the field is looking like," Baffert said. "It was a good race for him. I think the horse is turning the corner. I've just got to decide, Do I want to keep pushing him along? You know, he needs to win a race. If he's going to be competitive, we'll take him up there."

PREAKNESS: will be Saturday

"No doubt, he needs to step up," Correas said. "He will run a good race because he always does. But a good race could be a fourth, or a fifth or a sixth. We're working on that. He's giving us more, but it might not be enough."

Tiger Walk will wear blinkers for the first time Saturday, a change Correas hopes will improve the horse's focus.

The always confident Plank won't predict a victory, but the other 13 entrants don't concern him — including Kentucky Derby winner I'll Have Another.

"We won the Breeders' Cup two years ago with a 46-1 long shot," Plank noted. "Nobody thought that she could do it. But she won. That's what makes horse racing great — that lottery ticket in your pocket. I can't guarantee a win, but I know I'll bet on it. And why not that horse? This much I do know: We need to believe in long shots. That is what makes America great."

The 39-year-old Plank knows a thing or two about pulling of an upset. Soon after leaving the University of Maryland, where he played football, he took on Nike and Reebok by creating the Under Armour, a sports clothing and accessories company. Business got off to a slow start, but sales ultimately rocketed and provided Plank with a multimillion-dollar empire.

Although he's passionate about racing, for now Plank's day job remains a priority. For that reason, his sprawling, scenic farm also serves as home to business meetings and weekend brainstorming sessions for the company's top officials.

"This farm isn't exactly paying the bills. Having Sagamore, it's a retreat destination," he said. "Baltimore is very nice, but 17 miles away is a place as beautiful as anyplace in the country. We're very proud of it. What is Maryland? Maryland is about racing, and if we can help revitalize that industry, that's a pretty powerful message."

Plank believes Sagamore Farm is the perfect place to make it happen.

"I'm never going to shy away from a big goal," he said. "I think we have enough money to do something special with this broad of a platform, with as much history as Sagamore Farm has. We've been in a couple of big races and we've won some. Now we're thinking about chapter two and chapter three."

"Why not us? That type of mentality, there's nothing more American than that. And I don't think there's a better vehicle than the state of Maryland. We have a great history. It takes people back to a long time ago when horse racing was the No. 2 sport in America. We have that train of thought behind it. Because there's nothing that can rally a group of people like a horse, whether it's Barbaro or Big Brown or anybody else."

Right now, Sagamore Farm has 16 employees and stables 57 horses. The racing stable consists of 28 horses, with 15 of them untested 2-year-olds. Although Tiger Walk was purchased as a yearling, the goal is to develop the horses from an even earlier age.

"Cradle to grave," said Tom Mullikin, the farm's general manager. "The horse is born here. Then we raise it, break it, train it and race it on the training track."

That training track, by the way, is made up primarily of recycled Under Armour shirts. That doesn't mean Plank is cutting corners. Just being smart. "They told us we have to buy Lycra," Plank said with a laugh. "I said, 'Do you know how much Lycra costs? We're using our own stuff.' The only true athletic track in the world is here at Sagamore Farm."

It's all part of the master plan.

"There is a winning mentality that's in the water here, in the soil here, in the grass we use to feed the horses," Plank said. "And it has to become cultural. Maybe it doesn't happen with our first crop of 3-year-olds or the second crop. But in time, those things start showing up. I believe in time we will be able to realize our goal, which is to win the Triple Crown."

WOODS: announced as new Morehead coach

The Eagles have averaged 21.5 wins over the last four years, but have been locked in a fierce rivalry with Murray State to be the conference's premier program in the one-bid league.

"As far as Murray State is concerned, Murray State better be worried about Morehead State," Woods said.

Athletic director Brian Hutchinson said he let Woods know he had the job before Woods even got back on the plane to return to Mississippi on Friday and Woods joked he had no one to hug or give a high-five in the Huntington, W.Va., airport when he learned the decision.

When he finally landed, Woods said he had 96 text messages.

"I think my gut told me he was the right guy for us," Hutchinson said.

Woods said he doesn't fear playing the state's biggest programs like Kentucky and Louisville. Hutchinson said that would be a good thing, hinting that both programs would be on the Eagles' schedule next season along with 13 other teams that participated in various postseason tournaments last year.

"I walked into that," Woods said. "Put it this way, my situation, where I'm coming from, I'm no stranger, nor am I afraid to play anybody in the United States."

Woods played at Kentucky from 1989-92 under coach Rick Pitino.

He may be best known for scoring 21 points and hitting the go-ahead basket with 2.1 seconds left in overtime for the Wildcats in the 1992 East Regional final against Duke just before Christian Laettner made the game-winner that still irritates Kentucky's fan base.

Woods, whose jersey is retired at Rupp Arena, said the fans probably know his past better than he does, but that has little to do with his new job beyond name recognition.

"I am Sean Woods, the head men's basketball coach of Morehead State University," he said. "I am not Sean Woods who was a basketball player who played at the University of Kentucky. Has everybody got that?"

Since his playing days, Woods spent time on the coaching staffs at TCU (2006-08), Texas A&M-Corpus Christi (2005-06) and High Point (2003-05) before taking over at Mississippi Valley State. The position at Morehead State opened when Tyndall accepted the head coaching job at Southern Mississippi last month.

"The program Donnie left is in great shape," he said. "I promise I won't mess it up."

Reds score twice in 8th, beat Braves

By CHARLES ODUM
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — Brandon Phillips drove in the go-ahead run with a double off the centerfield wall and the Cincinnati Reds scored two runs off Jonny Venters in the eighth inning to beat the Atlanta Braves, 3-1 on Monday night.

The game was tied 1-1 when Drew Stubbs led off the eighth with an infield hit between the pitcher's mound and third base. Stubbs moved to second base on Venters' wild pitch. With one out, Phillips drove in Stubbs with the double.

Chris Heisey added another double, his third hit of the game, to drive in Phillips.

Braves first baseman Freddie Freeman left the game after the seventh inning with blurred vision in his right eye. His status was to be updated after the game.

Sean Marshall pitched the ninth for his sixth save. Pinch-hitter Matt Diaz was stranded at first base after hitting a leadoff single.

The Braves began the night in sole possession of first place in the NL East for the first time this season.

Logan Ondrusek (3-0) gave up one hit and one walk while recording two outs. Reds starter Homer Bailey allowed six hits and one run in 6 2/3 innings. Ondrusek has not allowed a run in 17 appearances this season.

Venters (2-2) gave up three hits and two runs in one inning.

NBA

76ers even series with 82-81 win over Celtics

The Associated Press

BOSTON — Evan Turner made the go-ahead layup with 40.4 seconds left and Philadelphia held off Boston the rest of the way with six straight free throws as the 76ers evened the second-round Eastern Conference series with an 82-81 victory Monday night.

Turner finished with 10 points, including his layup that put the Sixers up 76-75. He added two free throws with 12 seconds to go.

Jrue Holiday scored 18 points and Andre Iguodala added 13 points, seven assists and six rebounds for the Sixers, who blew a 10-point lead in the fourth quarter as the Celtics won Game 1.

Kevin Garnett had 15 points and 12 rebounds and Ray Allen scored 17 points for the Celtics.

Game 3 is Wednesday in Philadelphia. Philadelphia won its first playoff game in Boston since 1982 despite committing a playoff-high 19 turnovers and getting outrebounded, 47-36.

Spencer Hawes finished with eight points and 10 rebounds and Lavoy Allen scored 10 points for the Sixers.

Brandon Bass had 12 points for the Celtics, who couldn't quite repeat their comeback in the series opener. The Sixers led by 10 points early in the fourth quarter of Game 1 before the Celtics rallied for a 92-91 victory.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Dear Readers: A recent column from a reader with a very serious situation and a question about photographing the deceased at a memorial service generated some interesting, and differing, viewpoints. Here are a few of your thoughts:

■ B.J. in Missouri photographed his mother in her coffin: "She looked at peace, and that's how I see her."

■ Sherry, via email, says photographing the deceased was a common practice in the early 1900s and she's grateful because the casket picture is the only picture she has of her husband's grandmother.

■ Jess, via email, advises: "Any photo of any member of my family is absolutely priceless. Make all efforts to preserve these photos. Future generations will appreciate it."

■ Ann in Alaska does not find photography at a funeral to be in bad taste. Her uncle Bob was a photographer and he would photograph funerals to "preserve a chapter of history in a family." After Uncle Bob's funeral, close friends brought photos and film to share with others he had taken through the years.

■ However, L.D. in San Angelo, Texas, suggests a closed casket: "I remember my mother alive, full of life and doing the things she loved to do. When I attend a funeral, I politely decline to view the deceased. I prefer to remember people as they were when they were alive."

■ Ken, via email, suggests having a memorial card to give out and use the best picture you have of the person on it. Then friends and family would not need to photograph the deceased.

■ And finally, Sheryl, via email, wrote: "Somebody posted a picture of a deceased person at a funeral on a popular social media site. It wasn't there very long, so I presume someone with more sense took it down."

WRITE IT DOWN. Dear Heloise: When I buy a new electronic device, before I plug it into the wall, I write down the following information: the serial number, part number, model number and the manufacturer's contact information.

If I need the information, I don't have to move the TV, computer, etc. I make a document on my computer and it is easily retriev-able. This also is helpful for insurance purposes. — M.C.D. in San Antonio.

■ Also, make a photocopy of the receipt. The heat-sensitive receipt paper can fade over time.

RACK 'EM UP. Dear Heloise: I have a use for an old dishwasher rack. My dad put one on the wall above my mom's sewing machine. She hangs spools of thread on the prongs, and it also holds scissors, thimbles and anything else she needs. — Annette in New Jersey

LEAN ON ME. Dear Heloise: Regarding the reader's comment about loose shopping carts, I always feel safer with a shopping basket in front of me. Drivers appear more willing to stop for the cart than for me. — E.V., via email

Write to Heloise at P.O. Box 795000, San Antonio, TX 78279-5000, or fax to (210) HEL-OISE. King Features Syndicate Inc.

ENTERTAINMENT

■ Jay-Z is in a Philadelphia state of mind: The rapper announced a two-day music festival Monday in the City of Brotherly Love.

The "Budweiser Made in America" festival features nearly 30 acts "that embody the American spirit" across three stages at Fairmount Park on Sept. 1 and 2, which is Labor Day weekend.

"It's such an iconic place, so it felt like a natural fit," Jay-Z said of Philadelphia in an interview after the news conference. "You'll get to come out and have two great days, listen to some amazing music (and) discover some new bands."

Jay-Z was joined by Mayor Michael Nutter on Monday atop the city's art museum steps, made famous by Rocky. The festival benefits United Way Greater Philadelphia and Southern New Jersey.

The New York-born rapper said 70 percent of the acts are confirmed and include rap, rock, R&B, Latin and dance performers.

"I've always believed in great music," Jay-Z said. "I don't believe in the lines that separate music ... that's for people that can't easily define what they're hearing, so they have to put it in some sort of box."

IN THE STARS

HAPPY BIRTHDAY: Ease into whatever you do carefully. Get a strong foothold before you let anyone know what you are trying to accomplish. Preparation will be critical if you want to reach your goals. Help will follow once you are in a position to negotiate the best deal possible with the most auspicious outcome. Your numbers are 2, 12, 16, 24, 32, 36, 44.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Forget about personal problems. Get involved in a project that interests you and you will have less time to worry about the things you can't change right now. The limitations you've been dealing with mustn't hold back your professional progress.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your expertise will help you get ahead. An encounter with someone from your past will have an impact on the way you do things. A short trip will result in valuable information as well as an honorable commitment.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Help a cause or someone in need. Follow a creative path and you will leave a much better image regarding what you have to offer and are willing to do. A geographical change will help your state of mind.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Spend time with friends.

Anything you try to do with colleagues will be futile. An unusual package, letter or piece of information will open your mind to new possibilities. A new partnership is favored that offers greater promise and equality.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Step up and take your status and position seriously. Don't go for the glory when security should be your main focus. Comparing what you have to what someone else has will only lead to frustration and negativity.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take control and follow your desired path. Your communication skills and expertise will easily draw the attention of someone as gifted as you to share in a venture that can make a difference to your personal finances.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Put more time and effort into home, family and keeping the peace. Do something that will please everyone and keep you out of trouble. You can make personal alterations, but don't go over budget. Consider reuniting with someone from your past.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Follow through with your ideas. An opportunity to get involved in a business partnership or something that will help advance your career is present. Networking should be treated as a social event. Make your home more conducive to creativity.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): It's how you present what you do that will count. Work from home if at all possible and you will achieve the results you are looking for. Don't let emotional matters get you down when you should embrace a romantic opportunity.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Communication will be required if you want to get to the bottom of a problem that is affecting your home life. You can cover a lot of ground if you are open about the way you feel. Money matters can be successfully managed.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be careful what you say or how much you promise someone. It's important not to exaggerate or undersell what you are capable of doing or to what degree you want to be involved. Honesty will make the best impression.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your restlessness must not lead to a foolish personal decision. A job opportunity can be expected if you go for an interview or send out your resume. Go the extra mile and perfect your skills to better suit the position you want.
